Call for Applications 2017

Society for the Experimental Analysis of Behavior

We are soliciting applications for small educational grants from organizations that advance behavior analysis.

Purpose: SEAB will provide financial support for educational activities that advance the purpose and objects of the corporation: “... to encourage, foster, and promote the advancement of the science of experimental analysis of behavior; the promotion of research in the said science and the increase and diffusion of knowledge of the said science by the conduct of a program of education, by meetings, conferences and symposia, and by the publication of journals, papers, periodicals and reports.”

This program is not designed to fund individual research projects. Rather, it is intended to fund projects that may have a broader impact on the field. Examples of recently funded projects include:

- The Center for the History of Behavior Analysis to support the cost of creating a searchable and retrievable digital collection of scholarly works.
- The Prosocial Progress Foundation for the development of a film on behavior analysis research in education and child development.

Amount: We seek to fund one or more applications totaling up to $5000.00.

Applications: The brief (1 page) application should include:

- the purpose of the grant
- an itemized budget with justification
- a reporting plan that describes how the results of the award will be reported to the SEAB Board, along with criteria for evaluating the usefulness or success of the award in advancing SEAB’s mission

Email the application to the chair of the SEAB philanthropy committee, Tom Higbee (tom.higbee@usu.edu). Applications submitted by April 30, 2017 will be eligible for support that will be provided in June 2017.
