Journal of Biophotonics is an international journal covering the broad range of research on interactions between light and biological material in the fields of physics, chemistry, biology, and medicine. The coverage extends from fundamental research to specific developments, also including the latest biomedical applications and related technologies.