Fostering economic and social development in China

Volume 26 Number 3 May 2017

229  Fostering economic and social development in China: Overview
     David Floyd and Mizan Rahman
     This issue sets out to examine the economic and social progress being made in China at a time when growth has fallen a little from its peak.

231  The changing model of Free Economic Zones in China: To what extent will this further foster economic growth and entrepreneurship?
     David Floyd, Dabu Sun, and Ian Barnes
     Free trade zones play an important part in China’s economic development.

237  Establishing a viable institutional environment for entrepreneurship in China: A case study of Zhejiang province
     Cindy Millman and Zhengwei Li
     New ways of helping graduates in China to become more entrepreneurial are being established. Innovation and entrepreneurship are crucial for China to move up the value chain.

243  China’s financial system: Resolving the constraints for sustained growth
     Mohammad Shakil Wahed
     Although analyses based on recent data suggest that China has made progress in its financial system after 2005, certain areas still require further substantial improvements.

251  The impact of corporate social responsibility on customer loyalty: A case for two global corporations in China
     Xiaoming Lu, Hoi Wan Liu, and Mizan Rahman
     Corporate social responsibility (CSR) initiatives have differential impact on developing customer loyalty in the context of two leading international sportswear companies operating in China.

261  International investment by state-controlled enterprises: A source for concern?
     Peter Enderwick
     The international business activities of state-controlled enterprises appear to differ from those of otherwise comparable private-sector firms, giving rise to issues that provide a basis for corrective policy actions.

273  Strategies and servicescapes: Delivering user-focused health care in Europe and China
     Barry Ardley and Ning (Chris) Chen
     The health servicescape model provides an effective tool for both developed and developing markets in terms of both situation analysis and the strategic implementation of effective, user-focused change.

281  China’s economic growth and future prosperity
     Junie T. Tong and John McManus
     China has a population three times more than all other transition economies combined, and China’s economic development in the last two decades has been nothing short of phenomenal, having overtaken Japan as the world’s second-largest economy.