assessments of the status of the field are welcome as submissions. Reviews, meta-analyses, comparative or historical studies, and critical quantitative research, theoretical or methodological contributions, integrative personal relationships. In addition to original quantitative research, qualitative work focuses on attributes of individual partners in personal relationships, including those between romantic or intimate partners, spouses, parents and children, siblings, classmates, coworkers, neighbors, and friends are welcome. Typically published work focuses on attributes of individual partners in personal relationship processes (e.g., behavioral, affective, or cognitive), the internal structure of dyads and networks (e.g., size, density, hierarchy, solidarity, homogeneity), personal relationships in social contexts (e.g., families, work-places, historical periods, cultures), and the consequences of personal relationships. In addition to original quantitative research, qualitative research, theoretical or methodological contributions, integrative reviews, meta-analyses, comparative or historical studies, and critical assessments of the status of the field are welcome as submissions.
ARTICLES

Madelynn D. Shell and Tiffany N. Absher
Effects of shyness and friendship on socioemotional adjustment during the college transition 386

Charee M. Thompson, Lynsey K. Romo, Patience Ben-Israel, Marissa Owens, and Senoumou Keita
Social network members’ responses to friends’ breakup false alarms 406

Kyuho Lee and Peter Martin
Who gives and receives more? Older couples’ personality and spousal support 429

Jiaqi Zhou and Joanne Davila
Romantic competence behavior during problem solving among emerging adult dating couples: Development of an observational coding system 448

Sylvia Niehuis, Alan Reifman, and Cary Rebecca Oldham
Effects of relational transgressions on idealization of and disillusionment with one’s romantic partner: A three-wave longitudinal study 466

M. Rosie Shrout, Randal D. Brown, Terri L. Orbuch, and Daniel J. Weigel
A multidimensional examination of marital conflict and subjective health over 16 years 490

Andy J. Merolla, Jeffrey A. Hall, and Quinten Bernhold
Perseverative cognition, distracted communication, and well-being in everyday social interaction 507

Corinna J. Tucker, Erin H. Sharp, Karen T. van Gundy, and Cesar Rebellon
Perpetration of sibling aggression and sibling relationship quality in emerging adulthood 529