

Five of the best things you can do as an author

1. Create web-friendly text – Your article will be published on Wiley Online Library, one of the most viewed websites in the world. Optimizing your article for search engines will greatly increase its chance of being viewed and/or cited in another work. The crucial areas for optimization are your article's title and abstract, which are freely available to all online.
  - a. Construct a clear, descriptive title - In search engine terms, this is the most interesting element. Search engines assume the title contains all of the important words that define the topic of the piece, and thus weight most heavily words appearing in the title. Think of three or four different search terms that readers are likely to use when looking for articles on the same topic as yours, and help them by constructing your title to include those terms. See our Search Engine Optimization \(SEO\) page for some examples.
  - b. Reiterate key phrases - The next most important field is the text of the abstract itself. You should reiterate the key words or phrases from the title within the abstract itself, use known phrases from your field to connect with other researchers interested in this topic. There are examples which illustrate the difference between an abstract which is well-optimized and one which is not on our Author Services website.
2. Register for our e-alerting services which will notify you when your article is published and when it has been cited. Simply:

- a. Visit the journal's homepage
- b. Log-in, or register
- c. Click on Get New Content Alerts in the JOURNAL TOOLS menu:
- d. Follow the simple on-screen instructions.

You can choose to receive these alerts in either a Text or HTML format. Plus, you choose how often you would like to receive them – daily, weekly or monthly!

3. Sign up to our Author Services site to nominate colleagues to receive free access to your article when it's published.
4. Bookmark & Share – registering your article on reference manager sites will enable you to tap into academic social networks that help others discover both you and your research. Simply click on your preferred link from the right hand menu next to your article on Wiley Online Library. Add a link to recommended reading lists, your website and email footer, contribute to online blogs, listservs and discussion forums. See the “How to Cite” link from your paper’s abstract page online, like the one here).

5. Treat yourself - Authors, Editors and Contributors can receive a 25% discount on all Wiley books. Register here, on the Wiley Author Discount page.
