

A premium open-access journal without publication fee until 2021!

Scan and Follow WeChat Official Account for More Information

InfoMat, a combination of abbreviation of information and materials, will address the growing scientific interests in materials with unique electrical, optical, and magnetic properties and the application of these new materials in the rapid development of information technology. Without a doubt, the journal will serve as a high-quality platform for researchers working in a wide variety of scientific areas with a common interest in improving information technology and will dovetail materials and information technologies to propel the fast development of this emerging field.